It has been a while since we've heard from anyone who has used Skype on their smart TV. This is because Skype doesn't work well on Android TV. It's also not supported by many Smart TV brands, including Sony. To get Skype working on your Sony TV, you can connect it to an external Android TV box. If you're looking for a simple solution to this problem, you'll need to find an alternative to the Sony TV. There are a number of alternatives to Skype, including Google Duo and TrueConf. Google Duo, for instance, is a free option but lacks the auto-answer function. However, there are many advantages to using TrueConf for your video calling needs. For one, it's a 4K video conferencing platform with auto-answer. The downside? Unfortunately, neither of these options has auto-answer functionality. Is Skype Available on Android TV? If you are wondering - "Is Skype Available on my Android TV?" you've come to the right place! Here's how to download Skype APK to your Google TV. First, you need to enable Developer mode on your Google TV. Developer mode is a feature available on some Android TVs, which allows you to install applications from untrusted sources. To enable this feature, go to Settings > About and tap on the "Developer" option. Next, enable Unknown Sources and toggle the Downloader toggle to the "on" position. Then, you'll need to enable the webcam and microphone. Once you've done that, you'll be prompted to give Skype permission to access your contacts. Once you've granted those permissions, Skype will open in a new tab and let you start chatting. It may take a few seconds to install, but it's definitely worth the wait. After a few minutes, you'll see a message informing you that Skype has been installed. If you'd like to continue, go to Aptoide TV and follow the instructions there. Can I Use Skype on My Smart TV? Can I Use Skype on my smart TV? The answer is a resounding "yes." The popular online telecommunication app enables users to make free voice and video calls from anywhere in the world. You can even use Skype for instant messaging. It is available on many operating systems, including Windows, OS X, Linux, Android, iOS, BlackBerry, and Windows Phone. Smart TVs with Skype support can be found preloaded by many brands, including Samsung. There was a time when you could use Skype on your Smart TV. Many models, including the Panasonic TC-PVT60, were available with Skype apps. Several other smart TV manufacturers also sold similar models. However, Microsoft ended support for Skype for TV in June 2016. As a result, all Skype video calls stopped working on Smart TVs on July 1, 2016. READ ALSO: What Stores Take Android Pay?If you don't want to spend money on a new video calling device, you can use your existing TV to access Skype. Smart TVs that support Skype include Samsung Fire Sticks and Apple TV. Although the Fire Sticks don't support Skype natively, they do support other video call applications. It's important to note, though, that the Fire Stick uses the Android Skype app and doesn't support a smart TV-native version. How Do I Video Call on Android TV? The question is: how do I make a video call on my Android TV? The good news is that there are many options available. You can even use your mobile phone to make a video call from your TV! You can even use your TV as a video call receiver, which means you can make two video calls simultaneously! Regardless of what your needs are, there is a video calling app for it. First, download the Duo app from the Google Play Store and sign in with your Google account. Then, find the contact that you wish to video call. Once the call has been set up, you can now connect to your TV using a simple HDMI cable. To use Duo on your TV, simply connect your Android handset, iPhone, or laptop to the HDMI port of your TV. If you have an Android handset, you can still use the camera on your phone to make the call. As the COVID-19 pandemic has made video calling an integral part of our lives, it's nice to stay connected even while on the couch. The biggest downside of video calling on a small screen is that you might feel uncomfortable. Then again, your Android TV is a great size for watching a video, so you'll get the most out of it. You may even want to install the Google Hangouts app on your TV so you can have more than one person's video. How Do I Set up Skype on My TV? You may be wondering how to install Skype on your television. To do this, you must have a Samsung Smart TV and stable internet connection. Next, you need to download the Skype app to your Smart Phone and connect them to the same internet connection. Then, you can use Skype on your TV by screencasting. After installing the Skype app, you should connect your TV to the internet and open the Skype app. To install Skype on your television, you need a smart TV. A Samsung Smart TV has an integrated Skype app. You can use this to make free video and voice calls around the world. To use the Skype app on a Samsung Smart TV, you must have an Internet connection and a Samsung TV with a camera. Then, follow the steps outlined above. After installing the Skype app on your TV, you must connect the device to the Internet and then start making calls. READ ALSO: Where is Security Setting on Android?Alternatively, you can use an HDMI cable to connect your PC to your TV. This method is the most convenient and works with most laptops. However, you should remember that a webcam for your computer will not work with Skype on your TV. Therefore, you should always purchase a suitable TV camera. A good camera costs about PS100. If you don't have a high-end TV, you can buy a suitable external Skype camera. Can I Use Webcam on Android TV? If you want to use Skype on Android TV, you'll need some additional tools. The first of these is a web camera or headphone with microphone. Once you've got that, you'll need to sign up for a Microsoft account, which you can do from your phone. You can also install the Skype Android app on your phone. After that, you can start making Skype calls on your Android TV! The answer to that question may be no. Most Android TV devices support video calling, including the Samsung Smart TV. However, Netflix currently only supports a handful of devices. A webcam or powered USB hub should be compatible. You can also use Google Duo to video call. But be aware that you may have to pay extra for a video-calling app. In any case, if you have the right hardware, you should be able to use Skype on your Android TV. To get Skype on Android TV, you must first install the TrueConf app. It contains settings to enable video calling, which you can access via the webcam or through the USB port. Alternatively, you can connect your phone to the same WiFi network to use video calling. Afterward, you can switch to video calling, or use the webcam to screencast. Once you've installed the app, you should see an incoming video call on your Android TV. How Do I Use Skype on My Sony Android TV? If you're interested in using Skype on your Sony Android TV, you've come to the right place. The latest version is available to download from the play store for free, and it works great. However, if you're still having problems, you can try using Tellybean. This video calling application works on most Android TV models, and Sony has even enabled users to download it from their mobile devices. It uses the camera on the mobile device as input. It's free, but be aware that the iOS app is very buggy, so I would recommend downloading the Android version. READ ALSO: How Do You Reset an Android TV Remote?There are a couple of different versions of Skype for Android TV, so you should try to find the one that suits your device. If you're using the 32-bit ARM version of Android TV, you should be fine. This version of the app has fewer compatibility issues. Once you've downloaded the app, the Downloader will begin installing it for you. If you're unsure, follow the instructions below. Can We Do Video Call in Smart TV? If you have a smart TV, you may be wondering: Can we do video calls on it? It's not impossible, though. Many models of smart TVs use Android, but you can also use apps from the Google Play Store, such as Duo. To make a video call on a Samsung TV, you must have a USB webcam or an app that lets you connect to a computer. To make a video call on your TV, all you need is an application. The easiest way to do this is to buy a Smart TV with an integrated camera. If you don't want to spend a lot of money on a web camera, you can use a regular video camera to cast the screen from your phone or laptop onto your television. After installing the app on your phone, you can start your video call. A new feature from Samsung has also allowed you to do video calls from Samsung televisions. The new feature can be enabled on the device via the Google Duo app. If you already have a Samsung phone, you can use that to connect to the TV. Otherwise, you can use any of the video calling apps on any other smart TV, including those offered by Apple, Samsung, and Google. Then, you can call anyone using the app. Learn More Here: 1.) We still need face-to-face interaction even though we're working from home, and trying to keep socially distanced from our family and friends. If you're like me, you're probably using video-conferencing apps like Skype and Google Duo more now than ever before. I started using Skype a few years ago, while my wife was away medical school in the Caribbean. Telephone service on her island was very expensive and suffered from a lot of outages. We needed a more reliable & cheaper way to keep in touch. Honestly, I don't know how we would have made it through those two years without talking on Skype every day. Most of us use Skype on our laptops or smartphones, but I bet you didn't know that you can also use it on your Android TV's. There are a couple of tricks to getting Skype installed and looking great on your Android TV. We'll also cover those in detail in this article. Can You Use Skype on TV's? There used to be a version of Skype specifically for Smart TV's called, predictably, Skype on TV. They created it back when Skype was still a privately owned company, before they were bought by Microsoft back in 2011. After a few years and a few thousand tech-support call later, Microsoft quietly retired Skype on TV. However, that doesn't mean that you can't use Skype on your Android TV. It just means that you have to go through a few extra steps. While there's no official Android TV version of Skype, I was able to successfully sideload the regular Android version of Skype on my NVIDIA Shield TV. After a couple of tweaks, it was working great. How to Install Skype on Android TV There are several different ways to install Skype on your Android TV. In this section, I'm going to walk you through two of the most popular. The first method is directly through the Aptoide TV app store. Aptoide TV is an alternative app store that has been used by over 200 million people since it began. If you're not familiar with Aptoide TV, I wrote an article showing how to install it on your Android box and Android TV here. The second method is sideloading the Skype APK directly from APKMirror. APKMirror is one of the most popular repositories of Android installation packages (APK). It takes a little more effort to sideload an app versus installing it from the Google Play Store or Aptoide TV. However, there are certain apps that you can only install by sideloading, so it's definitely worth knowing how to do it. Install Skype Through Aptoide TV To get started, open Aptoide TV on your Android TV or TV box and click on the magnifying glass icon in the upper left-hand corner of the screen. Then search for 'Skype.' Depending on when you're reading this, you'll probably see a few different versions including Skype Preview and Skype Lite. We're going to be installing the latest release of the official Android version of the app: Skype - Free IM & Video Calls. When you search on Aptoide TV, it sorts the relevant search results by the most popular. That means that the latest release should be the first result listed. If you click into a result, you can see some basic information like the number of downloads, who published the app and whether it's a 'Trusted App' or not. Just be sure that you're downloading the full version of Skype, not a preview or 'Lite' version. Hint: Comparing the total number of downloads is an easy way to tell which one to choose. Once you've got the right app, click on the Install button to start the download process. The Skype APK is only around 40MB, so it should only take a few seconds to download, depending on your Internet speed. Once that's completed, Aptoide TV will automatically start the installation process. Skype doesn't require any special permissions at this point. The first time you open it, Skype will ask for permission to access your contacts, webcam and microphone. We'll get into those in a later section. For now, click Install to continue. A few seconds later, you'll see the message that Skype has been installed successfully. You can open Skype directly from this screen, or click Done to return to Aptoide TV. For now, click Done and go back out to your Android TV home screen. Skip down to the section on How to Set Up Skype on Android TV to continue. In this section, we'll cover how to install Skype from APKMirror. If you don't have Aptoide TV installed, or if you'd prefer to install a specific version of Skype on your Android TV, then this is the method to use. To get started, you'll need to have a web browser installed on your Android TV device. Any browser that can download files is fine (like Chrome). In this example, I'm going to use the Downloader app. It's a purpose-built app specifically designed to make it easy to search for APK files and install them on your device. You can read all about it in my article here. To get started, open the Downloader app. On the Home screen, type 'apkmirror' in to the search box and click Go. This pulls up a Google search results page. After you scroll past the ads, it should be the first result. Click to go to APKMirror.com. Once there, click the magnifying glass in the upper right-hand corner to open the search bar. Type in Skype and click Go. This will return all the different versions of Skype APK's that are available. Similar to the previous method, you're going to want to look for the latest full version of the Skype app. Do not download Skype Early Access versions. Once you've found the latest full version, click on the download icon on the right-hand side of the row. This takes you to the file's detail page. Scroll down until you see a blue button that says See Available APK's. Click on it to continue. Each APK is available in different versions. Here you can see there are four different versions of the same file. From the top, we have an ARM 32-bit version, an x86 version, an ARM 64-bit version and a 64-bit x86 version. Most Android devices have some version of an ARM processor in it. By contrast, if you have a Windows PC, it probably has an x86 processor. Without getting into too much detail, for most Android TV devices, you should always download the 32-bit ARM version. You may sacrifice a bit of performance, but you'll have far fewer compatibility issues. Click on the top row to go to it's download page. Once you're there, scroll down until you see the blue Download APK button. Click on it to start the download process. The Skype APK is around 40 MB, so it should only take a few seconds to download. Once it finishes, Downloader will begin the installation automatically. Click Install to install the Skype APK on your Android TV. Once you're done, you won't need the APK file any more. So remember to delete it to save space on your device. Go back to your Android TV's home screen and we'll open Skype and get it configured on your device. How to Set Up Skype on Android TV No matter which method you used to install Skype on your Android TV, the process is the same once you open the app. However, there are a few quirks to getting Skype to look right on your Android TV. So be sure to stick around until the end for some important final steps. Since we sideloaded Skype, we'll need to open it using Sideload Launcher, or a similar program. Don't worry, we'll create a shortcut on the home screen at the end. The first time you log in to Skype, it'll ask you to Log In or Create an Account. For the purposes of this article, I'm going to assume you've already got a Skype account. If not, head on over to Microsoft's signup page. It'll be easier to sign up for Skype on your PC rather than your Android TV. Enter your username and password in the next screen. Here's where I recommend having a USB keyboard or Air Mouse hooked up to your Android TV. It makes entering usernames and passwords MUCH easier. After you successfully log in, Skype will ask for permission to access your contacts. While you don't need to do this to be able to use Skype on your Android TV, it definitely makes it easier to start conversations with your family and friends. Click Allow to continue. At this point, Skype threw me a curve ball. It suddenly switched from Landscape mode to Portrait mode for the rest of the installation. If this happens to you, I've got a fix for this in the Final Steps section. Next, Skype asks for permission to access your device's webcam and microphone. Even if you don't have these installed right now, go ahead and Allow both of these permissions. Once that's finished, Skype will automatically pull up your contacts and any active conversations you've got running on other devices. Final Steps Now that Skype is up and running on your Android TV, let's make it easier to use. Force Skype to Landscape Mode As I mentioned, halfway through the setup, Skype switched from Landscape mode to Portrait mode. Remember that we installed the pure Android version of Skype, not a native Android TV app. Since this version of Skype was designed for smartphones and tablets, it still has the screen rotation enabled. But that's not what we want on our televisions. Thankfully, that's easy to fix. I've written an article showing step-by-step how to force an Android app into either Landscape mode or Portrait mode. I'll go over the highlights here, but for all the details, I recommend you check it out. To start, you'll need the Set Orientation app, which you can find on either Aptoide TV or APKMirror. You can install it using the same process that you used to install Skype. Set Orientation has several options that you can choose from. Normally, I like to leave it in Automatic. Even though it works for most apps, Skype still wanted to rotate to Portrait mode sometimes. I recommend setting Set Orientation to Landscape mode so you'll never have to worry about it. Create a Home Screen Shortcut Remember when I said that you needed an app like Sideload Launcher to open Skype? We're going to fix that here. Any time you sideload an app on your Android TV, the system doesn't create a shortcut automatically. I have an article showing several different ways to create a shortcut for your home screen. I used this website to create a Leanback Shortcut, which Android TV uses to launch apps. The process is a little involved, so I definitely recommend checking out my article for all the details. Once I created the shortcut and installed it on my Android TV, I was able to open Skype right from the shortcut on my home screen. Can You Use a Webcam With Skype on Android TV? It is possible to use a webcam with your Android TV, depending on the model you have. As long as the camera has UVC compliant drivers for Linux, Android will recognize it right away. I was able to get my Logitech C920s up and running easily with Skype on my NVIDIA Shield Android TV. I'm putting the finishing touches on an article that will go into more detail which webcams will work on Android TV. Look for that soon, but for now, enjoy using Skype on your Android TV!
